

The New Color of Money Safer. Smarter. More Secure.

Now is your last chance to order free educational materials on the newly redesigned U.S. $20 note!

The new $20 note, which began circulating in October of 2003, was the first of the U.S. Series 2004 currency to be redesigned, featuring new and enhanced designs and security features. A redesigned $50 note was just issued this past September and a new $10 note will be issued in 2005, followed later by a new $100 note. The worldwide transition to the new currency has been very smooth. To date, over 39 million $20 items have been distributed around the world.

Much of the remaining inventory of $20 educational materials is expected to be depleted by the end of this year. Accordingly, except for the English-version brochure and poster, we will be unable to fulfill orders for $20 educational materials placed after December 15, 2004 online. If you are interested in receiving educational materials featuring the new $20 note, we encourage you to place your order by December 15, 2004. These materials can be used in the classroom to help educate students on the newly redesigned currency by providing visuals and descriptions of the new notes' security features. Please note that PDF files of the $20 educational materials in multiple languages will remain available on the www.moneyfactory.com/newmoney Web site. Educational materials for the new $50 note will continue to be available to order throughout 2005. We will provide information about ordering materials for the new $10 note as soon as it is available.

Please visit www.moneyfactory.com/newmoney or call (877) 639-2877 and place your order by December 15, 2004, to ensure that you are able to receive the materials you need. And remember, all U.S. currency is good. For good.
